- 70 Kiapidou, Eirini-Sophia: The titling of Byzantine historiographical texts. Medioevo Greco 16, 2016. 119–143.
Dall'abstract: «(...) this paper focuses specifically on the titles of Byzantine historical texts, which are examined in relation to the texts themselves, their authors, and their time, as well as on the perception of historiography in the Byzantine and post-Byzantine age. It appears that there is a fair degree of regularity in titling practices of Byzantine historiography, with four basic fields of reference: genre, content, method of composition and tides of other (historical) works.» D'Aiuto.

A history of philology from Antiquity to the early 20th century, written for a cultivated, yet not specialist audience. The result is somewhat contradictory: on the one hand, the impressive mass of information will probably be far too dense for the public targeted, on the other hand, precisely the style of writing has generated approximations and shortcuts, not to mention stereotypes and mistakes. Among the stereotypes: “Byzantine philology mattered to later humanistic scholarship not for dramatic breakthroughs but for saving a lot of texts and scholarly practices otherwise lost”. Touwaide.

Dall'abstract: «The essay consists of five sections, dealing with some late-antique and Byzantine epigrams (...). (1) Edition and commentary of a brief collection of epigrams on Homer (... from the Anthologia Graeca), which is preserved in a handful of Homeric manuscripts (Ambr. I 4 sup.; Bodl. Holkh. gr. 116; Lond. Harl. 5600; Malatest. plut. d. XXVII 2; Marc. gr. cl. IX 2a; Marc. gr. cl. IX 16; Vat. gr. 29; Vat. gr. 915). (2) Edition and commentary of an hitherto unpublished Byzantine epigram on Homer (...) in Vat. gr. 29. Critical notes on two epigrams of various content (AP IX 365; IGM 27 = App. Anth. II 732 Cougny), (...) in the same Vatican manuscript. (3) Edition and commentary of three hitherto unpublished Byzantine epigrams (...), preserved in Vat. gr. 915. These epigrams might tentatively be attributed to Maximus Planudes. (4) Critical notes to some passages of the poems of Constantine the Sicilian, preserved in Vat. gr.

915. (5) Critical notes on the text of an epigram attributed to Patriarch Sophronios of Jerusalem, preserved in Vat. gr. 1607.» D'Aiuto.

- 115 Fazzo, Silvia: Le récit ancien sur l'assemblage de la Métaphysique d'Aristote: sa réception, ses implications, ses origines. Aevum 92, 2018. 163–177.

L'identificazione del passo 4.4–16 del commento di Asclepio alla Metafisica di Aristotele con la fonte di informazione per eccellenza sulle modalità e l'epoca in cui il filosofo greco avrebbe composto la sua opera, si accompagna alla riedizione del passo in questione, che F. fonda sull'esame autoptico dei mss. che lo tramandano e sulle edizioni ottocentesche di Brandis e Hayduck, dal quale ultimo F. prende le distanze omettendo l'interpunzione di 4.11 (ὥς ἔτυχεν compreso fra virgole): assente nella tradizione manoscritta e nel testo edito da Brandis, sarebbe «un hommage de Hayduck à l'autorité de Zeller», che, così interpungendo il testo, fornisce un valido argomento per negare il valore storico del passo. Edizione critica dei cantica dello Ione di Euripide, corredata di apparato colometrico e allestita sulla base dell'analisi dei due più antichi codici che ne tramandino il testo, i mss. Laur. Plut. 32.2 (L) e Vat. Pal. gr. 287 + Laur. Conv. Soppr. 172 (P), databili alla prima metà del XIV secolo: un confronto tra le divisioni dei cola da essi conservate «smentirebbe l'ipotesi di una dipendenza diretta di P da L» a sostegno della «tesi della dipendenza di L e di P da un antigrafo comune, forse attraverso una copia intermedia (π)»; si prende qui in considerazione, in particolare, a proposito dell'accurato resoconto delle correzioni e delle annotazioni apposte da Demetrio Triclinio al testo trádito da L. Luzzi.

Dall'abstract: «Thanks to a survey of the usual practices of quotation employed in Hesychius' Lexicon, this paper shows that Hesiod's name in Hesych. α 7017 Latte = Hesiod fr. sp. 396 Merkelbach-West is not necessarily to be considered corrupt – as the editors both of Hesychius and Hesiod have generally believed. Accordingly, the paper suggests briefly (and with all the due caution) two possible new interpretations of this Hesiodic fragment.» Luzzi.

Dall'abstract: «In Choricius of Gaza's declamation Apologia mimorum (...) one realizes that the defence of theatre is actually a cunning challenge to imperial power. Moreover the text can be seen as a remarkable theatre source. This article aims at disclosing and highlighting the subtle connection between defence (of theatre) and challenge (to royal power), going deeply into different sources, in particular some Novellae from Codex Iustinianus.»

The volume opens with a brief history of what could be defined as the Hesychius project in the 20th century, started and left unfinished by Kurt Latte for several reasons, including WWII. Even though Latte's volume had been well received by the critics, it seemed that a reprint would not be appropriate. A program for a new edition was launched. The introduction provides a notice on Hesychius, his lexicon and the additions to it, the uses of Hesychius in subsequent literature, and the codex unicus Marc. graec. 622, Constantinople, ca. 1420–30, used by Markos Mousouros for the Aldina edition of 1514. The paper analyses the religious attitude of John Lydus, which cannot be described as simply Christian or pagan, instead Lydus made an attempt to demonstrate a direct continuity between polytheist and Christian cults. By doing so he created his own personal religion, in which Christianity and paganism do not stand in a strict opposition. Juhász.

A challenging homoerotic reading of Constantine's ep. 3 and Theodore's reply (ep. 4), is supported by verbal parallels and double entendres found especially in the pederastic poems in the Greek Anthology. In both letters a contrast is drawn between envisioning the desired one during the day and dreams at night. (Text and translation of epp. 3 & 4 are at p. 143–157). Moffatt.

Dall'abstract: «The main goal of this paper is to draw a new stemma codicum of the A- family of the pseudo-Platonic Minos. However, beside the stemmatic analysis, the investigation takes into account both a papyrus (P. Ant. 3181) and a highly contaminated manuscript belonging to the F-family (Vaticanus Gr. 165 [Vat.]). The study of the papyrus will help us demonstrate the antiquity of the textual tradition of A (Parisinus Gr. 1807) and the collation of Vat. might can light on some controversial aspects of the history of A.» Luzzi.

In der von Agamemnon Tselikas geleiteten griechischen Facsimile-Reihenpublikation erschien bereits 2012, weitgehend unbeachtet, das kleinformatige (153 × 120 mm) Tetraevangelar von Korcë aus dem beginnenden 10. Jh., heute unter Nr. 93 im Nationalarchiv Tirana aufbewahrt, das auch auf dem Internationalen Byzantinistenkongress Sofia 2011 gezeigt wurde und im Begleitband zur Sofioter Ausstellung von Axinija Džurova ausführlich beschrieben wurde (hier Nr. 355, 93–97). Die Handschrift ist im Facsimile auf Albanisch, Englisch und Griechisch beschrieben, doch bedürfen verschiedene Informationen noch weiterer Klärung. Sowohl eine Verkaufsnotiz (a. 1182) mit Nennung des hauptstädtischen Peribleptos-Klosters als auch Kontonotizen (in der Ausgabe nicht erwähnt) müssen noch genauer untersucht werden. Die höchst qualitätvolle Facsimile-Ausgabe bringt nun die Voraussetzung, alle noch bestehenden Fragen zu dieser paläographisch und kunsthistorisch herausragenden Handschrift aufzuarbeiten. L'esame di alcuni toponimi e antroponimi attestati dal breve che elenca i beni in entrata e in uscita della chiesa madre della metropoli di Reggio Calabria nel periodo immediatamente precedente la conquista da parte dei Normanni (1059) consente a F. di approfondire l'indagine della «sfaccettata realtà extra-linguistica cui in continuazione [il breve] rimanda», «rivelando una infinità di dettagli della Calabria linguistica all'uscita dall'alto medioevo, tanto sul versante bizantino/neogreco, quanto su quello (proto)romanzo». L'analisi di documenti finora poco noti relativi al monastero benedettino di santa Maria della Pietra nel territorio di Viggiano in Val d'Agri (PZ) consente a G. di proporre una nuova localizzazione del cenobio di s. Giuliano: san Luca di Demenna lo avrebbe edificato sui ruderi di una costruzione preesistente «nel casale di s. Giuliano [...] sul corso del torrente Casale, che a nord-est di Grumento Nova si snoda nel territorio Grumentino immediatamente a sud del territorio di Viggiano», quindi nello stesso perimetro territoriale nel quale sarebbe poi sorto il monastero di s. Maria della Pietra, «divenutone in un periodo imprecisato il proprietario». Luzzi.

After 120 years and two editions (Hartel 1886, Schindel 1982), this is the third and most complete edition of the Vienna fragment G 2.314, the most important connection between antique and medieval textual tradition of Aeschines. Apart from a new transcription based on modern technology and a detailed palaeographical description with newly discovered features, the text of the fragment has been collated with 23 medieval and renaissance manuscripts (among them, six manuscripts have been collated for the first time), and with all of the known testimonia. As a result, the early textual tradition of Aeschines' speeches appears in a new light. Juhász.

This analysis of monotheism, defined here as an exclusively cultural institution, goes through its history in major categories and phases/periods from what is called here “The prophetic paradigm” to Byzantium. The chapters devoted to Byzantium deal with the internal divisions in the early Church, then with the model of trinity as language allowing for unity in the way of heaven. Concludes with a brief chapter on Chalcedon and the Orthodoxy, including the conflict between papacy and empire which led, over the long term, to Reformation. Touwaide.

[On the visit of venerable Anthony of Dyma to Constantinople.] Anthony of Dyma Lake, a disciple of Barlaam of Khutyn, and, subsequently, founder of the St. Anthony-Dyma Lake Monastery, visited the Patriarchate of Constantinople between 1238 and 1243. The article explores the historical events related to his trip, especially the transfer of the center of the Orthodox world to Nicea. When Patriarch Germanus II died in 1240 and the Nicean Emperor John III Doukas Vatatzes was unable to choose a new Patriarch, the Ecumenical Patriarchate was administered by its bureaucracy – the exocatacoeloi (ἐξωκατάκοιλοι), who held authority over six councils (σεκρέτα) and administered all affairs. By the absence of a Patriarch, the Patriarchate of Constantinople became “self-governing” in some sense. Biriukov.

[Emperor Justinian the Great and the legacy of the Council of Chalcedon.] The book examines the church policy of the Roman Emperor Justinian the Great (527–565) in regard to the anti-Chalcedonians, who were inner-church group opposed to the definitions of the 4th Ecumenical Council of Chalcedon. The work covers the period from 451 to 571 and

- deals with the background and immediate consequences of the policy of Justinian. The text is provided with several appendices, which contain a Russian translation of the main church-political and theological writings of the Emperor Justinian, relevant to the topic of the monograph. Chernoglazov.

The article deals with the anti-dualistic theme and the relevant linguistic content of the 42nd chapter of the South Slavic Kormchaya with commentaries, also known as the Zakonopravilo of St Sava of Serbia. The opinion supported is that the Slavonic translation of the chapter depends on its Greek compilative counterpart, which gives information about the Messalians and the Bogomils assimilated by them, to whom the Slavonic translator(s) attached the new 13th century term “babuni”. Dall'abstract: «The Synod of Mar Ishaq (410) seems to be an Oriental version of Constantine's reforms. In both cases, peace is established in the relations between Christians and the Empire: the community is unified by one doctrine and one disciplinary custom ratified by a Synod and by the Emperor. Yet the similarities between Constantine and Yazdgerd subtend a historical context in which the role of Marutha of Maypherqat, the Roman ambassador to the Sasanian court, stands out.»

[Andronikos Kamateros on the dispute between Manuel I Komnenos and Papal legates: an essay on the literary reading.] The “Sacred Arsenal” opens with a dialogue, which claims to be a record of a theological dispute between Manuel and the envoys of the Pope Alexander III (1158–1181) within the framework of Manuel’s unionist projects. Kamateros’ goal is not only to refute the Filioque doctrine and the primacy of Rome, but also to eulogize Manuel as a gifted logician able to develop solid argumentation based on irrefutable syllogisms. He contrasts Manuel’s self-characterization with the narrator’s view in the introductory section, and his interlocutors are shown in development. Biriukov.

First published in German in 2015. The reference to “altered states of consciousness” is about such moments as shock, meditative states, mystical revelation, and out-of-body experience (also including drug intoxication, however) that generates modified perceptions of time and space. The analysis explores the relationship between time and self, which can change in certain specific conditions. It certainly can be a key to read the mystical and ascetic experience by applying cutting-edge data from the field of neuro-sciences. Touwaide.

[Mount Athos at the time of St. Clement.] The prosopography of the late 9th century Athos is very restricted and comprises only 10 names: the saints Peter Athonite, Euthymius of Thessalonica and Blasius of Amorion, the monks John Kolobos, Joseph, Symeon, Onouphrios and George, and the protos Andrew (908). The Athonite monasteries of the period 840–916, we are cognizant of, are only two, the enigmatic “Monastery of Athos” and the “Monastery of Clement” (not of St. Clement), which were both absorbed by the monastery of Iviron, a Georgian monastic house founded in 980. martiri di origine orientale, come S. Teodoro (al Palaltino) e S. Giorgio (al Velabro)», sarebbero state istituite dai monaci greci in fuga dalle province dell'Impero d'Oriente occupate dai Persiani e dagli Arabi.

[The impact of the Exegesis of Origen on the argumentation of Arius in the context of Ancient philosophical theology.] Arius knew the Commentary on the Gospel of John by Origen, where the idea of the consubstantiality of the Father and the Son is rejected, but went further, proposing the doctrine of the non-existence of the Son before the begetting. His views had a significant impact of ancient philosophical theology. Subordinative theology corresponds with the Zeitgeist of that time and was influenced not by the biblical text, but by ancient philosophy. Therefore the Orthodox teaching of the Holy Trinity did not arise under the influence of ancient philosophy, but in spite of it. Biriukov.

La classificazione dei principali λογισμοί offerta da Evagrio Pontico costituisce il punto di partenza per l'analisi della modalità con cui i Padri Cappadoci diedero rappresentazione letteraria ai vizi capitali. C. individua nei loro scritti un repertorio comune di scelte lessicali, finalizzate a presentare la colpa come morbo, e di temi propri dell'opera evagriana, dalla quale i Cappadoci di discostano per la menzione dei peccati «più spesso in gruppo che singolarmente» e «in serie non ancora ordinate e sistematiche, secondo una tendenza già presente nell'epistolario paolino, come pure negli scritti origeniani». Nemesius of Emesa's allocation of the faculties of memory, imagination and reason to different cavities of the brain marks a development from ancient theories about the soul and its relation to the body. - 1109 Ivanov, Igor: О современном издании богословских сочинений византийского монаха Михаила Пселла. Christianskoe čtenie 5, 2016. 70–86.

[On the “Theologica” as a modern edition of theological compositions by the Byzantine monk Michael Psellos.] Many modern scholars both Western and Russian make their researches in the field of Psellos studies, such as L. Westerink, F. Lauritzen, D. O’ Meara, J. Duffy, L. Benakis, T. A. Šukin, A. V. Larionov, A. V. Barmin, and others. Soviet Byzantine studies were interested in Psellos only as historian and polymath; theological and philosophical matters are therefore missing from the works of Ya. N. Lubarsky and P. V. Bezobrazov, while V. E. Valdenberg and V. N. Beneshevich – as representatives of the ‘old Russian scholar tradition’ – paid great attention to them. Biriukov.

Avvalendosi dell'apporto della tradizione manoscritta della processione dello Spirito Santo e della testimonianza di Giorgio Pachimere, gli autori propongono di identificarne l'autore con «Niceta, nipote del vescovo di Maronea, arcivescovo e metropolita di Tessalonica» e prima ancora di S. Sofia a Costantinopoli, vissuto non più tardi dell'inizio dell'episcopato di Basilio (1155). La connotazione di Niceta con almeno due dei tre identificativi nei manoscritti che ne tramandano le opere consente a B. e D. di riconoscergli la paternità – oltreché dei suddetti – anche delle sul matrimonio degli schiavi e di un di tre serie di canonica. [Genre nature of the canonical catechism by Nicholas III Grammatikos, patriarch of Constantinople.] The work has a complex manuscript tradition, as seven editions of various Greek versions of the text are today available, with 27 as the total number of question-and-answer units. The author argues that the text originates from a collection of letters.

ta come alienazione. Seminari romani di cultura greca, n. s. 6, 2017. 201–222.

C. individua nella perdita di un corpo originariamente prossimo a quello divino e nella conseguente acquisizione di un corpo segnato dalla condizione umana la ragione dell'estraniamento dalla gloria di Dio della coppia protoplastica Adamo ed Eva, la cui caduta costituisce l'argomento della versione greca della loro Vita, nota anche come di Mosè. La possibilità per l'uomo di riscattare se stesso dalla mondanità – quindi dalla alienazione ed estraneazione da un tipo di relazione con la divinità «che la trasgressione ha distrutto, o se non altro profondamente lacerato» –, è interpretata dal giudaismo secondo il modello predominante dell'uscita dal mondo verso l'alto, mentre nella prospettiva degli ambienti che, sempre all'interno del giudaismo, gravitano intorno a Gesù, è «Cristo che ripristina il collegamento fra cielo e terra» e «riporta tra gli umani la gloria perduta».

Il saggio tratta la politica culturale delle autorità bulgare negli anni '70 e '80 del XX secolo che determinò la scelta e la pubblicazione di docu-menti italiani, interpretati come fonti per la storia delle terre bulgare nei secoli XIV–XVIII. Tale politica, legata alle celebrazioni del 1300° anniversario dalla fondazione dello Stato bulgaro medievale, nonché alla propaganda del regime, contribuì molto all’edizione di un numero significativo di fonti italiane per la storia bulgara sia in lingua madre che in versione bulgara. Vi prevalse la problematica socio-economica.

Dall’abstract: «Continuing a long-standing debate, the article is a reply to the recent work of E. Cuzzo and restates with added detail Jacob’s thesis of thirty years ago that the Breve chronicon Northmannicum is a forgery by the eighteenth-century abbot Pietro Polidori»; da notare il dettaglio relativo all'impiego del termine "Japygia" – «che con il Medio-evo ha ben poco da spartire» e dunque rappresenterebbe secondo J. un ulteriore indizio della sua non autenticità – che sembra aver esercitato un forte fascino su Polidori: questi, infatti, al momento di donare alla Biblioteca Vallicelliana alcuni codici greci acquisiti durante il suo soggiorno in Terra d'Otranto (attuali D 61, D 62 e D 63), premise al Vallic. D 63 – vergato in comune stile di Reggio – il celebre passo del "De situ Iapygiae" dove l'umanista Antonio de Ferrariis (della cui Vita il Polidori aveva curato l'edizione) esaltava l'eleganza della scrittura di Nardò in epoca medievale. The prophecies of the Armenian priest Yovhannes Kozern are judged to have shaped the history of Matthew of Edessa writing in the 1130s. One prophetic vision Kozern supposedly experienced in 1036–37 foretold decades of disasters and oppression for the Armenian people before "the king of the Romans arises and comes like an eagle against the Persian (i.e. Turkish) forces with a fearful multitude ... and the Persians and all the foreign forces shall take their flight". Lau provides detailed support for identifying that Roman king with John II Komnenos whose policies in 1137–38 in conquering Cilicia were fulfilling the prophecy at the same time as Matthew was completing his chronicle. Revisits the question of the relationships between the state in the Roman Empire (in the West) and the raising Church during the period 300–600, arguing that the Church played a major role in shaping the Western World not only in religion, but also in all aspects of society. Reexamines the classical interpretations from Gibbon to the traditional history of the Church (from “rise and fall” to “triumph of religion”), and offers an attempt toward a quantitative history of the diffusion and rooting of the Church together with an evaluation of the number of Christians in the different groups participating in the management of the state and the ecclesiastical endowments. L'analisi della testimonianza offerta da Michele il Siro su Isacco Comneno, imperatore di Cipro dal 1184 al 1191 (in particolare sulla sua proclamazione/incoronazione e sull'elezione da parte dello stesso Isacco di un patriarca di Cipro), induce G. a ridimensionare l'attendibilità della Cronaca di Michele come fonte storica e a mettere in guardia da un impiego acritico della stessa: pur contenendo utili e interessanti informazioni sulla storia bizantina del XII secolo, non è, infatti, secondo G. esente da errori ed equivoci derivanti dalla scarsa conoscenza delle procedure amministrative e delle istituzioni bizantine. I risultati della paziente analisi condotta sui capitelli di S. Sofia di Costantinopoli inducono R. a ipotizzare che la loro decorazione sia avvenuta, verosimilmente in cinque fasi, a Costantinopoli – dove i pezzi sarebbero giunti dalle cave a livello di sbizzato-semilavorato –, «non a terra, ma dopo che erano stati già posti in opera, quando erano già in situ»; lungi dall'essere un lavoro individuale, la decorazione dei capitelli di S. Sofia sembra connotarsi come lavoro d'équipe, frutto del contributo dei membri della bottega cui si riferiscono le sigle in lettere greche incise su di essi. Luzzi.

Dopo una parte introduttiva relativa alle ricerche sul primo Cristianesimo nella valle del Lykos, e sulle città di Laodicea e Tripolis sul Menandro, vengono illustrati nel dettaglio gli scavi ed i restauri, dal 2012 al 2015, nell'area del Santuario dell'Apostolo Filippo, frequentata da cristiani fino al XII–XIII secolo. All'illustrazione delle strutture architettoniche e dei materiali archeologici rinvenuti, in particolare ceramici, si aggiunge quella dei numerosi graffiti e iscrizioni dipinte, scoperti nel 2015 in un vano d'ingresso della chiesa, lasciati dai pellegrini con riferimenti all'Apostolo. Parimenti il ritrovamento di numerose ampolle e unguentari, con bolli con l'immagine dell'Apostolo, ha permesso di accertare la funzione del santuario anche come centro di cura e di guarigione. - 2238 Trippetta, Tiziana: La Chiesa rupestre di Santa Margherita in Melfi. Bollettino storico della Basilicata, n. s. 29, 2013. 367–388.
A seguito di un riesame storico-artistico degli affreschi della chiesa rupestre di Santa Margherita, nella periferia del comune di Melfi, T. afferma la necessità di ridimensionare la portata dell'influenza greca sul monachesimo vulturino, le cui cripte sono state considerate a partire dalla critica tardo-ottocentesca «insediamenti eremitici del monachesimo greco»; l'influenza bizantina (riscontrabile ad es. nel Cristo Pantokrator, in s. Michele Arcangelo e nella Madonna con Bambino) andrebbe circoscritta a un lasso di tempo compreso tra la seconda metà del X e la prima dell'XI secolo, mostrando una pluralità di indirizzi che comporta «da un lato una sostanziale adesione a modi di origine bizantina e orientale, d'altro canto l'acquisizione di elementi di rinnovamento in senso occidentale».

A proposito della decisione del Concilio in Trullo (Quinisesto) del 691–692, in cui si decideva, nel canone 82, “di rappresentare, d’ora in avanti, l’agnello che toglie i peccati del mondo, cioè Gesù Cristo Dio, sotto la forma umana al posto dell’antico agnello”. La storiografia moderna ha voluto leggere le disposizioni conciliari, di cui papa Sergio I rifiutò la sottoscrizione richiestagli dall’imperatore Giustiniano II, in funzione politica antiromana; in conseguenza di ciò si è voluto spesso riconoscere un effetto del contrasto tra Roma e Bisanzio anche sulla tradizione pittorica occidentale, datando proprio all'epoca di Sergio I alcune raffigurazioni dell'agnello (ad esempio quella nell'affresco rinvenuto in Santa Susanna, altrimenti attribuito al pontificato di Adriano I, 772–795). L'A. contesta in linea generale questo nesso causale (tuttavia occorre dire che lo stesso affresco di Santa Susanna – ritrovato conservato in un sarcofago, dove era stato deposto in frammenti – rimane tuttora incerto nella sua determinazione cronologica). [Gold Byzantine hyperpyra pressmarked with the monogram of Tsar Ivan Aleksandăr (1331–1371).] The coin is a part of a coin hoard from the second half of the 14th c. On the obverse side are scratched 11 vertical traces cut across with one horizontal, together 12. The author suggest that these traces marked the carat weight of the coin which is 12. More interesting is the scratched monogram Tsar on this odd fence of traces.

Dass ἐπὶ τῶν οἰκειακῶν im XI. Jh. ein wichtiges Büro für die Verwaltung von Domänen des Fiskus war, ist für das IX. Jh. völlig unerheblich und lässt keinen Rückschluss auf die Agenden des kyr von Cherson zu! Die Belege für letzteren – ausschließlich Siegel von drei Männern – dürften aus den ersten Jahrzehnten des neuen Themas auf der Krim stammen.

Descrizione e analisi di un sigillo plumbeo bizantino finora inedito, proveniente dalla località di S. Giorgio in Cabras (provincia di Oristano). Il confronto col materiale sfragistico che presenta sul recto l'iconografia della Vergine e sul verso il monogramma cruciforme per il nome Θεόδωρος, attualmente compreso nella collezione Dumbarton Oaks e datato grosso modo ai secoli VI–VII, incoraggia M. a datare il sigillo in questione al pieno VII, se non all'VIII secolo, «durante il quale è noto – e dimostrato dai progressi della ricerca scientifica – che la Sardegna mantenne una linea di condotta istituzionale improntata al rispetto della sovranità bizantina». L'iscrizione, datata al 625 circa, fu rinvenuta nel 2009 all'interno di una tomba privilegiata. Il testo richiama l'anafora eucaristica. L'autore propone per la decorazione che la circonda un confronto forse non casuale (tesi decisamente ardita a parere nostro) con disegni simili dell'età del Bronzo e di quella del Ferro, e sembra attribuire senz'altro all'iscrizione una valenza magica, cosa certamente possibile ma anche questa forse da riconsiderare meglio.

[“Sceptical” Harmenopoulos. Remarks on the law regulations 1.3.3–9 of Hexabiblos.] Argues that Constantine Harmenopoulos, author of the Hexabiblos, gives the impression of being sceptical about the correctness of particular rules concerning the conditions of usucapio which are inserted in the Hexabiblos. This 'scepticism', however, is related to the sources used. The misinterpretation caused has to do with one of these sources, the Ponema Nomikon, a legal compendium compiled by the judge and historian Michael Attaleiates. Penna.

Focuses on the interpretations and uses of “astral sciences” among Chinese society, contrasting the different narratives and their construction. Parallelisms are established with Greek science, including the deconstruction of Chinese science as a mythic original place of further epiphenomena in Western culture. Can be an inspiration to historians of Byzantine science because of the investigation of the concept of transmission east-west and for the fragmentation of the history of a scientific discipline it offers and for its study of the construction of a unitary, monolithic concept of the history of a scientific discipline among Western historian of sciences. Touwaide.

- 2820 Panaino, Antonio: Astrologi cristiani alle corti Sasanide e Cinese. Bizantinistica. Rivista di Studi Bizantini e Slavi s. II 18, 2017. 149–165.
P. indaga il complesso e contraddittorio rapporto tra astrologia e Cristianesimo, che comporta da una parte «un atteggiamento di generale ostilità del mondo cristiano verso il determinismo astrologico», dall'altra un sentimento di simpatia e ammirazione riscontrabile soprattutto in Iran, durante i regni di Kawad I (488–496– 498–531) e di Xusraw Parwez (591–628) – dove gli astrologi cristiani godettero di un certo prestigio, tanto tra gli Zoroastriani, quanto fra gli stessi cristiani, proprio in virtù della loro capacità divinatoria –, e in Cina, presso la corte imperiale dei Tang; nel contesto specificamente bizantino, invece, la tolleranza e preservazione dell'astrologia fu dettata «dai vantaggi intrinseci che essa offriva» in virtù «del suo coinvolgimento di molteplici settori sia del sapere, sia della prassi» e, in particolare, dei suoi addentellati con una disciplina altrettanto pratico-teorica qual è la medicina. Critical edition of two Arabic translations of the treatise on geometry by the 1st-century Alexandrian mathematician Menelaus. The first translation has not been preserved in its entirety, and the second by al-Mahani (fl. 853–866) has been revised by al-Harawi (10th cent.) to whom it had previously been attributed in literature. 16 contributions on the history of astronomy spanning Mesopotamia to China, 1500 BC to the end of the 11th century. Introduced by a history of the “Brown School of History of Science” illustrated by Otto Neugebauer and David Pingree, and now by the editor of the present volume. Analyzes the major formats for science writing in the Greek and Roman world, particularly in mathematics, medicine and techniques. A major question is the possible link between genre and format and between format and audiences. Five different writing genres (poetry, letter, encyclopaedia, commentary, and biography) are analyzed through case studies. Analysis of 30 arithmetical epigrams from the Greek anthology, followed by Eratosthenes’ Letter to King Ptolemy. Touwaide.

This book is about the exercise of science within royal circles, fostered by patronage and characterized by multi-disciplinarity and possibly a certain cross-disciplinarity. Decomposes the phenomenon of royal patronage from the figure of the king himself, to courtesans of all kinds, including the rituals of patronage characterized, among others, by the spectacle of science. Will be a useful instrument for the analysis of By-

- zantine science in which imperial patronage was not a minor component. Touwaide.

This volume about the Renaissance editor Janus Cornarius (ca. 1500–1558) will be of interest for the tradition of the Greek and Byzantine medical texts which Cornarius assiduously studied, edited, and translated, particularly Hippocrates and Galen. Identifies the manuscripts consulted by Cornarius for his Hippocratic editions (p. 79–112) and lists all his editions and translations of Byzantine texts (p. 465–478), which were not only medical: Paul of Aegina (1533), the Geoponika (1538), Artemidoros (1539), Basil of Caesarea, In navitatem and Ad adolescentes (1539), Basil of Caesarea, Opera omnia (1540), Aetius of Amida (1542), Epiphanius (1543), Adamantius (1544), Johannes Chrysostomus (1544), Psellus (1549), Basilus, Opera omnia (1551), Synesius and Georgius Pachymeres (1560).

Surveys classificatory systems from Dioscorides and Galen to the 12th century. It is divided in the ancient foundations (Dioscorides and Galen); the lists of substitutions (antemballomena or Quid pro quo); the late-antique herbals such as the Alphabetum Galeni, the Herbarium attributed to Apuleius, or the De viribus herbarum, which dominated the literature in the field until the end of the 12th century. The pharmaceutical/pharmacognostic literature, received in the West through the translation into Latin of relevant Arabic treatises, renewed the field by introducing rational classificatory principles best represented by Avicenna's Canon. L'esame dei dati forniti dalla Dignitatum a proposito della denominazione seniores/iuniores relativa alle e ad altri reparti dell'esercito, consente ad A. di anticipare l'origine della pratica nomenclatoria solo di qualche anno rispetto all'epigrafe di Flavius Aemilianus (356 d.C.), individuando nella creazione dei reparti seniores/iuniores «un fenomeno che ha interessato maggiormente l'Occidente» a motivo delle «travagliate vicende belliche di questa imperii tra IV e V secolo, le quali resero necessario un ricambio maggiore all'interno dell'esercito rispetto all'Oriente». La discrepanza tra il numero delle e quello degli scudi rappresentati, con valore meramente simbolico, in testa ai lemmi nei capitoli della Dignitatum dedicati ai due officiorum, sembrerebbe, invece, riflettere l'assetto assunto dalle tra il 380 e il 412 piuttosto che essere connessa con la steura in tempi diversi «non solo delle due metà del documento, ma anche delle liste delle e degli apparati iconografici contenuti nelle sezioni relative ai officiorum».
